Trial of Huff for the Murder of McRavey.

The public manifest considerable interest in the trial of Harry Thompson alias Huff, and the court-room is generally well-filled with spectators during the examination of witnesses. The evidence of the witnesses examined last Saturday, though circumstantial, was strong against the defendant. One witness testified that Huff remarked a short time before the killing of McRavey, that he would fix him, or words to that effect. Another testified that Huff drew a pistol on him, as he approached the river bank, about a mile from Goldbndia, and remarked that McRavey was killed and that witness knew it.

Capt. Pierce, of Virginia City, the last witness on the stand before Court adjourned, testified that he knew Huff at Palisade, and hearing that he was accused of murder, went to the jail to see him. While conversing with him, Huff said, "If it wasn't for whiskey I wouldn't have done it." The counsel for defendant attempted to break the force of this evidence by a sharp cross-examination. The witness was asked, among other things, if he had been accused of a criminal offense while in the assessor's office at Eureka. Witness replied, sharply that it was none of counsel's business. Here the Court interposed and informed the witness that he might decline to answer, but when he did answer questions of counsel it must be in respectful language, and that he felt it his duty to fine him $5 and admonish him that if the language was repeated a heavier penalty would be imposed.—Silver State, 12th.

A FEARFUL SCENE.—The Cologne Gazette observes that Bulgaria has on several occasions figured in history as the scene of "atrocities" no less horrible than those lately committed by the Bashi Bazuks. The Greek Emperor Basilus II. was nicknamed "Bulgaroktonos," because he ordered 15,000 Bulgarian prisoners to have their eyes put out, a few only being left one eye, in order that they might guide their fellow prisoners back to their homes. Even more atrocious was the massacre of the Gothic settlers in Bulgaria. The much praised Emperor Claudius II. gives the following account of this massacre in a letter cited by the historian, Trebellianus Pollio: "We have destroyed 320,000 Goths and sunk 2,000 ships. The rivers are covered with shields, their banks with bones; no road is free from blood; the huge barricade of wagons is deserted, and we have captured so many women that each of our conquering soldiers can take two or three for his share."

SALT LAKE, February 10.—Exceptions taken to rulings and sentence of John D. Lee, the Mountain Meadows murderer, were overruled by the Supreme Court of the Territory today, and the Second District Court was ordered to fix another day for execution. It is probable an appeal will be taken to the United States Supreme Court.

"Which is the largest gland?" asked a Chicago Medical Professor of the newest arrival in his class the other day. The student buried himself in deep and attentive thought for a moment, and then brightening up suddenly, exclaimed: "The largest gland, sir, is England." Then the Professor kindly led the young man aside, and pathetically advised him to think no more of medicine, but to join a minstrel show or enter the army.

A Southern paper calls attention to the closing sentences of Cox's speech on Louisiana affairs: "Her sugar plantations have been turned back into swamps" and her cotton fields into wastes." And then says: "The last sugar crop of Louisiana was the largest ever grown in the State, and the cotton crop was never exceeded but once." The two statements don't read well together. Mr. Cox didn't know what he was talking about.

There are 37 married men, 21 single men and two widowers in the Nevada Assembly. Sargent is the oldest of them all and McIntosh is the youngest. In the Senate, Ross is the oldest and Cresswell is the youngest.

Silver City is to have a jail, and the newspaper men of that place are glad. Their lodging will not cost them so much hereafter.

Punch in his dictionary gives the definition of the word "conscience": "My rule for another man's conduct."

A little boy's first pair of trousers always fit, if the pockets are deep enough.

Sensible Words from Bayard.

Bayard said to-day if the Electoral bill should come up after what has now passed, he should vote for it. He denounced the Democrats for their opposition to the tribunal. He takes no gloomy view of the future, even if Hayes was elected, and said that if the decision was in his favor he would cheerfully acquiesce. He thought the next four years would, under either Hayes or Tilden, settle the Southern question to a great extent and determine the status of parties.

The words of the statesman Bayard fall with pleasing cadence on the ear. He favored the formation of the Electoral Commission, and having been a member of the joint committee that proposed the Electoral Compromise and being a member of the Commission, he is imbued with its spirit and familiar with all its proceedings. He is a conservative man, a leader in the Democratic ranks, and one of the few statesmen now in the United States Senate. Therefore what he may say on this all absorbing subject is worthy of the highest consideration. With Edmunds, Conkling and Thurman he has already made an enviable reputation. The people of the United States were not distrustful of President Ferry, but there were issues involved and such a complication of Electoral questions that a strong desire was manifested, directly and indirectly, that a new election be held or an impartial tribunal be found by which the Presidential question should be amicably settled and the political excitement, frustration of business consequent upon a disturbed condition of national affairs, be allayed. Many non-partisan men were surprised at the party vote of the Commission. The Democratic politicians who strongly favored the Compromise bill now more and denounce the decisions of the Commission. The Democratic press, as the World and Sun, are highly displeased and heap abuse on the Tribunal. The Republican press, as the Tribune and Times, is elated over the decision in the Florida case, but hold themselves in readiness to stoutly condemn any and all action by the Commission, or at least, of any thing done that may favor the Democrats.

The nation is bathed in politics, while unpartisan justice stands trembling, awaiting the action of the grand tribunal. The eyes of the civilized world are turned on the Electoral Commission; but they are men, and subjected to the severest of tests. They have not the support which they ought to receive, but, instead, open condemnation, or chilly indifference meet them at every turn. Where are the Aarons and Hars who supported the bill? Has the tribunal erred, and, if so, who has clearly established that error? Men should be slow to denounce the actions of a body of leading men in whom they professed confidence, and whose duties are yet uncompleted. We, through our representatives, approved of the Commission, and whatever may be their final verdict, we should, as good citizens like Bayard, cheerfully acquiesce.

Legislative Correspondence.

CARSON, Nev., Feb. 12, 1877.

Editor Gazette: Among the few little processes now in vogue at the Capital, is the making of officers. A Warden was made to-day in very good shape by the election of C. C. Batterman, on the first ballot, by a respectable majority. Capt. Rawlings was the only opponent, and he, I believe, received 26 votes on a joint ballot. I think that if the thing had been prolonged for a couple of hours that Mr. Hyman would have been put in nomination, for a small man got up and commenced addressing some one in a very low and almost inaudible tone, at the same time holding his head so low as to conceal his features from the many who were striving to catch one word of the gentleman's secret prayer, and when he did elevate his voice, he was heard to say Mr. Hyman was a martyr. He was immediately ruled out of order, on the ground that as there was no indictment against Mr. Hyman, a defense was unnecessary. The motion to reconsider, the vote on the Hoodlum bill, which took place on Friday, was carried in favor of reconsideration, notwithstanding the objection argued by Mr. Shoemaker, who made a very nice and pointed argument against a reconsideration. A very conscientious gentleman rose to explain that the father of the Hoodlum bill had in some way touched a tender spot in his stomach, and in making known his grievances you could plainly see the red coming to Mr. Mighels' face, who immediately rose to explain, and as soon as he was through he was answered in kind. The controversy will not result in another Bennett-May affair, but I will risk my reputation as a guesser that it is never called up again.

Mr. Boardman's Gambling bill is a novel bill, yet I have not heard a Senator or member of the Lower House speak of it but that endorsed it, and I believe it will pass. And I will say right here that if Boardman's convictions tell him he is right he will stay with it.

I think the Bullion Tax bill is going to try the nerve of some of the honest law-makers, for some of the lobbyists have about exhausted their ingenuity in trying to make a hole, lined and galvanized with technicalities, and amendments, and omissions, so complicated as to allow members to challenge their constituents to tell them which side of the question was best calculated to accomplish their desires, or those of the millionaires.

The town is improving in the way of life. One small boy was arrested to-day, and several were not. The Ormsby House ball to-night will, in all probability, be a success, unless it is an exception to the rule. Bob Lowery, the gentlemanly, courteous, but not good-looking champion of these dances, never makes a failure except as an auctioneer. Yet, strange to say, Bob is in favor of the Gambling Bills, as he says his experience is that it has made a serious breach in the friendship heretofore existing between him and his landlord. But, for fear, I may miss a chance to sponge something, I will close, as I see a liberal-looking man approaching, with a smile on his countenance, and I am one of his intimate friends just after his per diem has left the State Treasurer's hands.

To-morrow we hear of the Bullion Tax, the new Prison, and various other matters and things calculated to make the average legislator quake, and forget what he told his constituents when he left home. Still, a reasonable hope is entertained that some men will try to make laws instead of capital, and that is the opinion of

TELEGRAPHIC.

A Washington correspondent says: The Louisiana case will probably come up to-day. It will be argued on the Republican side by Evarts, Stoughton and probably Matthews, and on the Democratic side by Trumbull, Carpenter and Campbell. The report of the Commission on the Florida case does not, it is said, satisfy some of the able legal minds among the Republicans in both Houses. They have no hesitation in accepting the conclusion, but they do not entirely like the reasons given for coming to the conclusion.

A New Orleans special says: The people here believe the Democratic members of the Grand Commission should refuse to serve any longer if the rule be adopted excluding the merits of the Louisiana case from consideration.

The N. Y. Times thinks the Democrats, by refusing to go on with the count, would plainly violate the law. No vacancies can exist in the tribunal except by death or physical incapacity.

The New York World thinks it undeniable that the events of the past week has jeopardized public confidence in the Supreme Court, which is a more serious calamity than putting at risk any claims of any possible Presidential candidate.

A Washington correspondent says: The Sergeant-at-Arms of the House notified Wells and Anderson that he had prepared new quarters in one of the committee rooms of the Capitol in which they were to be imprisoned hereafter, but they declined to leave their present confinement in the crypt.

A Washington special says: The Democratic case in Louisiana will stand on four legs: First, that the Returning Board had no statute authority to canvass for Electors; second, that if it had, it lost its authority by refusing to fill its membership; third, that in the absence of requisite affidavits it had no power to exclude the vote; and fourth, that the Board sold its decision for money.

POLITE SELF-ABNEGATION.—My Lady (anxious to get home)—Shall we turn to the right, Thomas, or go straight on? Thomas (the new boy, much flattered at having his taste consulted)—Lor', my lady, it don't make no hods to me!—Punch.

Destructive Conflagration.

The Fire-Brand again at work.—The Depot Hotel almost totally destroyed by Fire and Water. Estimated Loss $15,000.

Last night, about 12:30, the people along Virginia street were aroused by a loud cry of fire. But very few people were stirring at the time, and some thought the alarm false, while others were told that the fire was in the Reno Hotel. The fire bell, however, soon called out the citizens, and a large cloud of smoke hovering over the Depot Hotel, showed where the fire was, although no flames could be seen from the outside. We arrived upon the ground before the alarm had fairly sounded, and outside of the house none knew exactly where the fire was. Lodgers came hurrying down however, and one could plainly see by this time that a fire was raging in the western end of the building, and on the 4th story. There were no roomers on this story except three persons employed about the Hotel, a porter, watchman and Mrs. Johnson, the waitress. The porter was the first to give the alarm, and just escaped from the suffocating smoke in time. It was supposed that everybody had escaped from this upper story, as the fire burned very slowly, and the volume of smoke which gathered in the burning building rendered it impossible to venture higher than the third story. The work of removing trunks and valuables from the second story had meanwhile been carried on vigorously, when some men, in trying to reach the fourth story, heard cries and moans through the stifling smoke, and knew that poor Mrs. Johnson was meeting death alone amidst the fire, and beyond the reach of human aid. Again they tried to penetrate to her, but all to no avail.

About 20 minutes after the alarm, a stream was gotten upon the west end of the building, from the depot cistern, and a little later "48" appeared and got to work, when the fire had gained so much headway that it was feared the entire building must go. A great difficulty was encountered during the progress of the fire in procuring axes and ladders to enable the firemen to make the best use of their water supply. Soon after the arrival of the 48, the steamer Reno No. 1, got on a stream, and a great shout went up from the crowd as they thought all except the attic might now be saved. A fine stream at each of three corners seemed to place the fire under control. The head engine was employed on the west end, No. 48 had taken her hose up to the third story, and the steamer nozzle was held upon the top of the roof by Messrs. Ross, Jones and Borden. The fire burned very slowly, and the good work done by these streams seemed to limit the fire to the place of its origin, when, about 2:30 and it was found necessary to move the engines. This necessitated much delay, and the fire again began to gain strength, and the eaves of the house having burned through, began to fall in masses of coals and endanger the surrounding sheds. These were, however, protected by volunteers, and the steamer, having attached two strings of hose and planted herself at the planing mill ditch, soon sent two streams of water into the flames, and the fire was forced to succumb, about 4 A. M. A visit to

THE BUILDING

Reveals the following condition of affairs: The fourth story or attic, in which the fire originated, was entirely destroyed, together with its contents, by fire. The flames also penetrated the floor and down to the third story, where the plaster served to check it, and the depth of water on the floor prevented it from going lower. Each story, however, below the fire was literally drowned. The floors settled from 8 to 16 inches in many places, and the furniture was a total wreck, the water filling and saturating everything in the house.

THE LOSS.

Mr. Chamberlain, the proprietor of the hotel, was in San Francisco at the time of the fire and has not yet arrived, hence it is impossible to make an accurate estimate of his loss, but we do not believe that $15,000 will replace the Depot Hotel in its former plight. Various tales are current as to the amount of insurance upon the building. Mr. Myers, the bookkeeper, informs us that Chamberlain holds a $5,000 policy in the Home Mutual, and that he had an additional policy of $10,000 in another Company which expired on the 8th of the present month. Mr. Myers has not learned whether it has been renewed. Mr. Chamberlain will arrive to-morrow morning, when more accurate statements may be made in regard to these matters.

ORIGIN OF THE FIRE.

There were only three persons sleeping in the upper story, and these had been in bed and asleep some time when the fire awakened the porter, and rushing to the door he saw the smoke coming from near the chimney at the west end of the house, and as he looked down to the floor he saw that the fire had evidently come from the chimney. An examination shows that the fourth floor had settled some, and with it the lower part of the chimney, causing a crack between the bricks large enough to allow fire to pass out. The porter says he heard the fire roaring near this point, and there seemed quite a draft through this break in the chimney.

INCIDENTS.

When the fire had been placed under control, Messrs. Ross and Jones penetrated to the fourth story, and while fighting the fire, passed from room to room until they reached the northeast corner, where they found the unfortunate victim of the fire and smoke. Mrs. Lena Johnson lay upon the floor, face downward, where she had suffocated, and the flames had begun to devour the body. The remains were removed to Saunders & Co.'s where an inquest was held, and the body was visited by large numbers to-day.

We commend the discipline shown by No. 48. That is what we lack; and citizens who looked on last night might reflect upon the organization of our fire and police forces with profit.

The cupola which surmounted the building was shrouded in fire for three hours and threatening to fall at any moment, in fact seemed so unsecure that the firemen were ordered away from it several times, but it still stands, although sadly scarred and burned. Wm. Ross, Jr., W. H. Jones and Frank Borden showed commendable courage in carrying the steamer's nozzle to the top of the building, and Ross did good work with his naked hands in tearing off shingles and boards to admit the stream. Adam Clark got his hands badly cut on window glass in climbing through into the third story.

The liquors and fixtures from the bar-room were moved out and most of them stolen. Dan Hartley caught one of the thieves and marked him one from the stolen.

The fire might have been extinguished at 3 A. M. had there been enough hose. The constant cry was for "more hose."

Several growlers complained of the steamer. Just save your growl gentlemen until you provide stock to work her with. Give Courtois hose, fuel and oil enough, and then growl. We call attention to the facts that there is now no fuel, no oil, and not enough hose to run that engine. And it would be well not to growl until these things are provided. Courtois, Reed and Huyck stood by the steamer and made her do good work. They are entitled to thanks.

Allen Bragg caught one of the gentry in the act of rummaging a bureau, and threw him out doors.

Nick Hammersmith was at the front as usual.

Every citizen of the town was only too anxious to render aid, while our transient population, for the most part, occupied themselves with pilfering. Property owners should see from last night's experience the necessity of two things: 1st, to organize and equip our steamer, and 2d, to rid the town of thieves and vagrants.

BIRTHDAY FESTIVITIES.—Mr. Isaac Fredrick, our well-known townsman, has lately received several well-timed ovations and compliments, which may justly make him proud of the 50th year of his life, which he now enjoys. On Sunday evening last Mrs. Fredrick gave a very pleasant party in honor of Mr. F.'s 50th birthday. Friends were present in large numbers. The Reno Brass Band serenaded the family and guests, after which some sixty persons sat down to a feast, and dancing was in order until 4 A. M.

But last night a still rarer treat was in store for the entire household. Mr. M. M. Fredrick came down from Virginia last night bringing with him the celebrated German Band. M. M. having extended us an invitation to enjoy the feast, musical and otherwise, we all proceeded with lanterns, Carl Beck in the lead, to the residence of I. Fredrick, where we arrayed ourselves before the gate and gave orders for "no guilty man to escape." Then Carl waved his baton, and as the rich harmonies stole out upon the keen night air, we lost ourselves and all knowledge of circumstances under the inspiring influence of the serenade. They had scarcely concluded when the host appeared and threw the doors open. All entered and the pleasant hostess showed herself a mistress of the hospitable art, so much so that we almost wished her spouse a succession of such birthdays, and we might be there to see. The band gave another selection at the parting, after which the guests wished the genial host and his amiable wife "a thousand more" and departed with the good feeling engendered by a feast both substantial and ideal.

GOOD TEMPLARS' PARTY.—The social given at the Opera House last evening by the Good Templars was attended by a respectable number of dancers all of whom enjoyed themselves to the utmost. The music, consisting of four pieces, under the direction of Aleck Case, was unexceptionally good, and at 1 o'clock, when the medley was played for the last dance, every one expressed the opinion that they had had four hours of solid enjoyment.

DR. FLATTERY.—This successfully celebrated physician and surgeon, whose world wide traveling reputation and 35 years graduated practical experience as a specialist, etc., will arrive at Chamberlain's Hotel, Reno, Saturday, February 17th, to be consulted free of charge one week, and where he will continue to treat successfully with new remedies, embracing the best approved treatment from the most remote Oriental and Occidental countries for the cure of all forms of chronic, special and general diseases, however malignant and inveterate they may be. N. B.—The Doctor can be consulted at 108 C Street, Virginia, until date of above visit to Reno.

Died in the Flames.

Large numbers of our citizens to-day viewed the remains of Mrs. Lena Johnson, the unfortunate victim of the fire last night. She was found lying upon the floor of her room, face downward, with one hand beneath her body. She had a walking skirt on, which garment was entirely burned away on her back. The face was much swollen, and the protruding tongue, together with the condition of her hair, showed that death had been caused probably by asphyxiation. The hand beneath her body looked very natural, while both limbs were burned away to the knees. She must have become bewildered and upon meeting the rush of smoke either fainted or lost all presence of mind until the moment for escape had gone forever. The following is the verdict of the Coroner's jury:

In the matter of the inquisition upon the body of Lena Johnson, we, the undersigned jurors summoned to appear before N. C. Haslund, Coroner of Washoe county, at the rooms of Sanders & Co., at Reno, Nevada, on the 13th day of February, 1877, to inquire into the cause of the death of Lena Johnson, now lying in said room, having been duly sworn according to law, and having made such inquisition after inspecting the body and hearing the testimony adduced, upon our oaths each and all do say that we find the deceased was named Lena Johnson; was a native of Sweden; aged about 27 years; that she came to her death in the night of the 12th-13th day of February, 1877, at Reno, Nevada, by the burning of the Depot Hotel, where she was then employed as a chambermaid; and that her body was found burnt and dead in the northeast corner of the fourth story of said building; the cause of which fire is unknown to us. All of which we duly certify by this inquisition in writing this 13th day of February, A. D. 1877.

One or two of Reno's clergymen demonstrated that they could make a pretty good fight against the fire fiend last night, and succeeded almost as well as they do in pummelling the other demon from the pulpit.

To-morrow we shall have a word to say about the meeting of the Democracy of Washoe county and their little set of resolutions looking to the defeat of the prison appropriation bill, vide this morning's Journal.

The Fire Department should be provided with several ladders, hooks and axes, more hose and several cisterns.

ANNOUNCES to the citizens of Reno that he has opened a Rapid Transit in London.

London is served by three rapid-transit roads—the North London Railway, which traverses the northern suburbs above the houses, and is twelve miles long; the Metropolitan District Railway, seven miles long underground; and the Metropolitan Railway (the first built), which is thirteen miles long underground. There are a few branch lines in addition to these, and the main lines are connected with the principal lines of railway running into London at the several large termini. The Metropolitan cost $3,000,000 a mile, or $39,000,000 in all. The Metropolitan District cost $3,700,000 per mile, or $25,000,000 for the whole road; and the North London the smaller sum of $1,500,000 per mile, or $18,750,000 in all. Thus the three roads, running thirty-two miles, cost $83,250,000. The bulk of the passengers on all these lines are third-class—that is, artisans, laborers, and the poorer classes going to and returning from their work. In the aggregate the percentage of passengers is one-tenth first-class, one-fifth second-class, and seven-tenths third-class. The working expenses of each line vary—the highest, and underground line, being 55 per cent. of the receipts, and the lowest, also an underground, being 39 per cent. This latter is the first railway of the kind built, and pays about 4 per cent. on its capital. The highest pays 4½ per cent., the lowest about 2 per cent.

HOW THE SECRET WAS DISCOVERED.—Marshal Jewell is a typical Yankee, "smart as chain lightning," and cute as they made 'em, even in Connecticut. Governor Jewell, according to report, came to over the Russians while Minister to that country. It is said as a matter of fact that Governor Jewell, while in Russia, found out the secret of the famous Russia leather. The secret is the result of the use of birch bark tar, with which the skins are dressed in place of tallow and grease, the latter substances being so largely used as food among the lower classes. This tar, which is carefully saved when it exudes from the wood when burned, was first used as a substitute for wheel grease in Russia, as it is to this day, and then for the filling and dressing of skins. By a system of careful inquiry, and literally following his nose, during his visit to some of the great Russian tanneries and curriers' shops, Mr. Jewell found this compound in a great kettle ready for use, and thus the mystery was solved. It is not expensive, costing about $10 a barrel, and he immediately ordered ten barrels and sent them to various leading leather manufacturers in this country, with instructions, and the result is that genuine Russia leather goods are now made in America, and doubtless will soon be sold at nearly fifty per cent. below former prices.—Patterson Press.

Of General Bartlett's brave and merry spirit, Dr. Brickett, who was General Angur's medical director at the first assault on Port Hudson, tells this story: Soon after the beginning of the assault Gen. Bartlett was brought out on a stretcher to the surgeon's headquarters. "Ah, General, sorry to see you in this condition; where are you wounded?" "I have got a bullet through my wrist and a flesh wound in my right leg. I don't know whether the other leg (the wooden one) is wounded or not; you will have to take that off and examine it."—Boston Globe.

Miss Mason, "dressed in a tight-fitting suit of black alpaca, the skirt cut short, and with heavy laced shoes," threw Henry Vidal, of Jersey City, in two fair falls, according to the rules of the wrestling ring.—Eastern Paper.

That is nothing. We have known a little woman who did not weigh a hundred pounds, in long skirts and slippers, to throw a big fellow as high as a kite. It was not by the rules of the wrestling ring, however, but by a little trick called the "cold shake."—Virginia Enterprise.

Norwich Bulletin: Science has its triumphs, but we believe it has never yet satisfactorily accounted for the existence of the middle-aged woman who attends all the donation parties with a present of a flannel pen-wiper, and eats $4 worth of food at supper, and subsequently leans up against the wall with her eyes shut and sings, "Nearer My God to Thee."
